Patrick H. McGaughey CPF, IOM is an international business consultant to chambers of commerce, industry associations, and private industry clients across the United States and Canada. His outstanding successes during his career as a broadcaster, chamber executive, and medical administrator have qualified him to share his expertise and skills with business executives and their teams coast to coast.

As an educator, Pat has been a faculty member of the United States Chamber of Commerce Foundation's Institute for Organization Management since 2000. Pat has been selected to serve as the graduation keynote speaker at many past Institutes.

Pat earned his Certified Professional Facilitator (CPF) designation by the International Association of Facilitators after facilitating hundreds of strategic and tactical planning sessions for chambers of commerce, industry associations, government, and private industry.

While Pat has facilitated hundreds of annual organization planning sessions, he is an excellent keynote speaker and is acclaimed one of the Top-5 Enter-Trainers in the United States for his ability to help people laugh a little and learn a lot at his seminars and business workshops.

Patrick H. McGaughey, CPF, IOM has received many civic awards and he has served in various leadership capacities including president of the Northwest Chamber Leaders Conference and president of the Idaho Association of Chambers of Commerce. He is an honored recipient of the Rotary International Paul Harris Fellowship Award, and he received the mayoral "Key to The City" for his outstanding community service in The Dalles, Oregon.

Pat and his wife, Gail, reside the beautiful resort community of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. They have two children, five grandchildren and a fishing boat always geared up and ready for the beautiful lakes that surround them.
