Libby Spears is the founder of Bravo cc, a Communications and Consulting Venture, that works with professionals and corporations from across the United States to stand out in a crowded and competitive marketplace. For more than 12 years she has developed the highest quality training and leadership programs, all designed to help her clients communicate with power, confidence and integrity. She owns every stage she is on from the corporate classroom to national conferences.

Libby's client list including JCPenney, GameStop, Accenture, Overhead Door and Stantec Engineering all speak to how in demand she is as a speaker and educator. The author of two books, Libby has a love for writing and teaching. She is gifted at challenging people to get out of their comfort zone and try new things. Whether coaching executives from the C-Suite to working with a team to close a multi-million dollar sale, developing successful leadership programs for corporations, or captivating an audience from the conference stage, Libby's troublemaking tendencies may be her greatest strength. She is not afraid to ask the tough questions or have the conversation for the purpose of making BIG things happen.

A native of Lubbock, Texas, Libby's first paid gig as a speaker came at an early age. As a seven-year-old she was invited to tell a joke at an in-studio taping of a game show. When she was done, her life changed forever: She got paid! Years later, Libby taught college in the communication studies departments at the University of North Texas and Texas Christian University. In 2005 she started Bravo cc. Today, she focuses her business on three things: To educate, liberate, and entertain every person she works with.

Libby is a wife and mom, a coffee addict, remembers way too much pop culture trivia from the 1970s and 1980s, was a debate nerd in high school and knows every word to the 1980s rap classic, Bust a Move.
